

Market intelligence and consulting analyst

About InteDelta

InteDelta is a consultancy which helps financial institutions better manage their risk. Our areas of expertise cover the major types of risk faced by institutions: market, credit and operational risk as well as a number of more niche specialisms. Our clients include financial institutions in the banking and asset management space, from some of the world's most pre-eminent investment banks to medium sized banks in developing markets and hedge funds. We also work with software vendors and other consultancies where we can add value to their service offering to their banking and asset management clients.

The role

We are currently experiencing growth in our market intelligence and consulting product streams and wish to recruit an analyst to assist in these areas. The role will comprise a number of areas:

Market intelligence analysis

- Production of survey questionnaires
- Arranging and conducting meetings or conference calls with participants of research
- Writing research reports

Consulting projects

Working with our senior consultants you will assist in the delivery of our consulting engagements. The work will span all of our areas of expertise and typical tasks will include data analysis, client liaison and production of presentations and reports.

Product development

Working with our Managing Director you will participate in the launch of new consulting products. This will involve the development of value propositions and working with our business development managers on the sales and marketing approach.

The working environment and career opportunities

InteDelta is a niche consultancy with big ambitions and an entrepreneurial spirit. You will contribute directly to the development of the business. We work hard but also enjoy ourselves. Although we're small, we work with some of the world's most prestigious financial institutions and many of our engagements are international. The role provides excellent opportunities to progress into more senior market intelligence and consulting roles. The only thing holding you back will be the speed with which you can learn.

What we're looking for

You will have demonstrated an excellent record in academic achievement. The subject you have studied is not relevant, but you should be able to demonstrate the ability to quickly grasp complex concepts and be able to express these in a clear, concise and engaging written style. Prior experience of working in financial services is not required, but you should have a strong interest in the City. You will be dealing with senior contacts within our clients and you will need to have a confident inter-personal manner.
